32nd Sunday in Ordinary Time

He is the God of Life (Lk 20:27-38)

One of the things I enjoy most during my stay in USA is the change through the four seasons of the year which is not possible in India. ‘The Fall’ is almost over now. The sidewalks are filled with dry leaves. The leaves still left on the trees would exhibit motley of colors. The ‘Fall’, is it a sign of death or life? I ask myself this question every time I see a falling leaf. This question is more meaningful even as we keep the memory of our departed brothers and sisters in this month of November.

The liturgy of the word on this Sunday, even as we near the end of the liturgical year, invites us to contemplate on the mystery of God in relation to human death and life! Jesus assures us that there is life after death because our God is the God of life.

Jesus versus the Sadducees – belief in the resurrection of the dead

The Sadducees were probably the followers of Zadok (2Sam 15:24). They upheld the importance of the written Law, and not the oral traditions. In this, they differed from the Pharisees. And because the written Law (the Torah – ‘the first five books of Moses’) was not very clear about life after death, the Sadducees did not believe in the resurrection of the dead. As Josephus, the first century Judeo-Roman historian, points out, the Sadducees believed that the soul and body perish together at death.

Traditionally, the Jews assumed that at the death of a person their soul went to the underworld (‘Sheol’ in Hebrew, or ‘Hades’ in Greek). Here the dead person existed in a form that was not clear but surely lifeless. Psalm 115, for instance says, “The dead do not praise the Lord, nor do any that go down into silence” (v.17). Even Prophet Isaiah has his doubts: “For Sheol cannot thank thee, death cannot praise thee; those who go down to the pit cannot hope for thy faithfulness” (Is 38:18).

When the Sadducees try to trap Jesus on his belief about life after death, Jesus comes out very clear about his stand: God, His Father is the God of Life. He cannot see human beings become silent in the depths of the grave.

Jesus and His Father – our hope in this life and the next

The Bible presents us a God who is not only a living God, but he is also a life-giving God. He shares his breath of life with us humans (Gen 1:7). He is a God who sustains our life. The Psalmist prays, “Preserve my life according to your steadfast promise” (Ps 119:159). This image of God as a life-giver is so powerfully portrayed in the vision of Ezekiel in the valley of dry bones (Ezek 37). God constantly raises us, as individuals and as communities, to new life. He raises us to new life, in the present life and in the next.

This belief in eternal life acts as the foundation of our hope in this life – a hope that provides courage and endurance. This is what we see in the story of the Maccabees brothers that we heard in the 1st reading of today. They are not afraid to be killed because of their belief in a life beyond death. They are able to endure suffering because their faith provides meaning and purpose.

I would like to conclude this reflection with this statement, “our belief in life after death provides meaning and purpose to our present life”.

Yes, even the tree that sheds its leaves this ‘Fall’ will blossom next spring. Rev. Prince Raja

End of the Year of Mercy: The Year of Mercy will “officially” close on Sunday, November 20th when the Holy Door at the Cathedral of St. Joseph the Workman will be closed by Bishop Callahan. The faithful of the Diocese are invited to join with our Bishop in the celebration of Holy Mass at 10:30am and the meaningful Rite of Closing of the Holy Door to offer thanksgiving for the Lord’s abundant mercy showered upon us in the Jubilee Year of Mercy. However, just because the Holy Year is coming to an end we must remember that “the steadfast love of the Lord never ceases; His mercies never come to an end; they are new every morning and great is His faithfulness (Lamentations 3:22-23).
